

The Yield Growth strategy seeks to generate both income and growth with volatility lower than that of the equity markets by utilizing a diverse set of asset classes (Equities, REITs, Fixed Income, Closed-End Bond Funds, etc.).

Outlook and Positioning:

The pandemic has fueled inflationary pressures not seen in decades, and the war in Ukraine and China's zero Covid policy have further aggravated these pressures in 2022. Meanwhile, central banks have been more aggressive in raising interest rates. All asset classes, except commodities, are undergoing downward pricing adjustments to reflect tighter financial conditions and higher rates. These growing headwinds are feeding into recession worries. Inflation remains a critical issue, and investors should be prepared for higher rates over the next few months. However, we think the markets have meaningfully priced the Federal Reserve's rate hikes into the yield curve for this cycle.

We remain cautious as lower earnings expectations may not be priced in and could put additional downward pressure on equities. Companies have been cutting profit projections and signaling a slowdown in hiring recently. We remained defensive with our equities positioning and have cash in the portfolios for opportunistic buys as we look to increase the portfolio's yield. Bonds have been a poor diversifier to equity risk in the last year, but we believe the fixed income market now has more credit spread and yield opportunities. As we gain more clarity on the path of inflation and the earnings impact of tighter financial conditions, we may look to add more exposure to longer-duration fixed income.

Contributors and Detractors:

Carlyle, Intercontinental Exchange (ICE), and Stryker detracted from performance. Carlyle is an alternative asset manager building out private debt and real estate platforms to diversify its private equity business. Although the industry is currently out of favor, we look to add to Carlyle as a beneficiary of the growth in alternative assets with institutions and retail platforms alike. ICE's exchange and fixed income data businesses have remained resilient, but the slowdown in the mortgage market has hurt its mortgage real estate cloud platform. An increased debt profile stemming from a recently announced Black Knight acquisition has also impacted the stock. In our opinion, Stryker is one of the best long-term positioned companies in MedTech, but supply challenges and inflation are weighing on the company's ability to drive margins through 2022 and into 2023.

AIA Group, Amgen, and WP Carey were the stocks that contributed to performance. AIA, the leading life insurer across Asia ex-Japan, has low regional insurance penetration and a favorable demographic that includes growing household incomes in China and the ASEAN countries. Amgen is a reliable biotechnology company with an improving pipeline offering dividend growth prospects in an environment starving for increasing income streams. WP Carey is a diversified net lease REIT that has assets in the U.S. and Europe with around 60% of its leases supported by CPI rent escalators.

Portfolio Activity:

We reduced exposure to risk assets by selling out of Masco, Ares Capital, and Sixth Street Specialty Finance. We eliminated Masco to lower our exposure to home improvement as it seems the consumer is beginning to cut back on discretionary spending. We continue to own Home Depot and Lowe's because the housing industry still has solid, long-term secular tailwinds. Housing has strong fundamental support due to favorable demographics with millennials moving into their prime years for single-family housing purchases. Since the global financial crisis of 2009, the housing market has been severely undersupplied, fueling the significant home price and rent inflation in the last two years. We exited our two positions in Business Development Companies (BDCs): Ares Capital and Sixth Street Specialty Finance. Both are well-managed BDCs in the space, but we were concerned by the potential of greater-than-expected weakness in credit quality driven by softness in the macroeconomic environment.

We are in the process of initiating a position in a closed-end bond fund, Western Asset Investment Grade Bond Fund (PAI). PAI is an investment grade, no leverage, closed-end fund yielding 4.7%. Closed-end bond funds have historically been a good source of yield and diversifier for our strategy. We think opportunities are beginning to open as the underlying assets have been revalued, and the discounts to NAV are beginning to widen meaningfully from historical averages.

The views presented here represent the opinions of SeaBridge Investment Advisors based on analysis of publicly available information. The opinions of other analysts based on these data may differ, including other analysts in SeaBridge. The conclusions of the analysis may not be realized in the future. There may be other factors which have more influence on future growth, economic recovery, and market performance than those presented here. There may be errors in the data referenced in this analysis. Investment involves risk and past performance is not indicative of future performance. This is for information only and should not be considered a solicitation or offering of any specific investment products or services. This is not a recommendation to buy any security or sector. SeaBridge may buy or sell securities for client or personal portfolios at any time in the future depending on individual circumstances or changes in SeaBridge's conclusions about the outlook. There is no representation about the future performance of the stocks mentioned in the Commentary. There are other stocks in the portfolio that performed worse than the examples presented here. SeaBridge's opinion of the economic and market prospects may change in the future. There are differences among portfolios managed by SeaBridge in each strategy based on client-specific factors. Not all portfolios hold the same securities. Not all stocks held in the portfolio perform similarly. SeaBridge manages portfolios in several styles. No part of this document is to be re-produced without the written permission of SeaBridge Investment Advisors LLC.